

May 4, 2014

Parents,

As far as TCAPs are concerned, “Been There, Done That!” Your children were spectacular during the testing last week, showing focus and persistence when necessary, and “cultivating stillness” when finished.

Though the sunshine beckons and standardized testing is complete, rest assured that learning continues throughout the month of May in our classroom. We have important foundational lessons still to cover in Math and Social Studies, and in Language Arts and Science we will be engaging in special in-class projects to apply and extend the knowledge and skills acquired this year.

The McQueen family has graciously offered to host an end-of-year 4th grade celebration at their home on Tuesday, May 27th. We will head over to the McQueen’s about noon and engage in various indoor and outdoor activities throughout the afternoon. Details to follow.

In addition, many special school community events are scheduled over the next 3 weeks – please refer to Mrs. Harr’s recent email for details.

Lest you be caught unawares tomorrow morning, this is Percy Jackson “Camp Half-Blood” week in Middle School. Drop-off personnel may appear slightly different than usual (remember Hagrid during Harry Potter week?)

As always, please feel free to contact me with any questions, comments or suggestions. Have a wonderful weekend!

Mr. Mac
